Fellowship Overview	The Male Sexual Health and Reproductive Medicine fellowship is a one year fellowship designed to provide fellows with comprehensive postgraduate training in the disciplines of male sexual medicine, genitourinary prosthetics, male reproductive medicine and management of male hypogonadism. The fellowship has a particularly strong focus on penile prosthetics, with a broad surgical experience in both the penoscrotal and infrapubic surgical approaches to the procedure. Fellows will additionally gain proficiency in reproductive microsurgery, with a robust experience in microsurgical varicocelectomy, vasectomy reversal and microdissection testicular sperm extraction. The fellow will be trained in penile duplex ultrasound, intracavernosal injections, intralesional collagenase (Xiaflex) injections for Peyronies disease and office based sperm retrieval techniques. By program completion, fellows will have the expertise needed to provide comprehensive subspecialty care for male sexual dysfunction and male fertility. This is a specialized clinical program focusing in the management of male sexual health and reproductive medicine. Male sexual health is a focus of all three of our faculty members, with Dr. Eid serving as one of the highest volume penile prosthetic surgeons in the nation. Dr. Berookhim and Dr. Harris Nagler focus in male fertility and microsurgery as well. Dr. Nagler is the former President of Beth Israel Medical Center in NY, and former chairman of the department of urology there. He is also a past president of the Society for the Study of Male Reproduction (SSMR) and the Society of Male Reproduction and Urology (SMRU) He is currently President of the Urology Care Foundation.
